To Whom It May Concern:

I am Prof. Samshik Jang. I was director of Language Education Center, at Kumoh National University of Technology (now called Kumoh National Institute of Technology), in Gumi from March 1996 to February 2008. I have been asked to write a letter of recommendation for Steve D. Watson.

Steve worked here in my university from April 1998 until April 2002. He taught conversational undergraduate classes during the main sessions, twice taught a graduate course in English teaching methodology, and taught non-credit classes early morning or in the evening. During the summer and winter, Steve taught classes to elementary, middle, and high school teachers. In fall last year, he taught an early version of a new approach that he is working on, the so-called The Two Hands approach.

Steve received the highest rating among the foreign professors from the teachers he taught. He is diligent, creative, and progressive in his approach to language learning.

He is honest, agreeable, and cooperative with his colleagues, and he was most cooperative and helpful when I had troubles.

As director of Language Education Center of the university whose job included helping, giving advice to, and supervising foreign professors here, I fully recommend him to the teaching post he is seeking.

Sincerely,

Samshik Jang, Ph.D.
